

Coronavirus and mental wellbeing – for pregnancy

This brief guide has been produced to support people who are pregnant during the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

Infectious disease outbreaks, like the current Coronavirus (COVID-19), can be scary and can affect our mental health. It can create feelings of stress and being overwhelmed with the unknown and uncertainty over the spread of the virus.

Being worried at this time is normal, but following the Five Ways to Wellbeing and connecting with others, being active, keeping learning, giving or supporting others and taking notice of your environment can make a big difference to how you feel. Our guidance shows some great ideas on how you can incorporate the Five Ways to Wellbeing whilst pregnant.

A full guide to Coronavirus infection and pregnancy: Information for pregnant women and their families' can be found here: Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists Coronavirus \(COVID-19\) infection and pregnancy – guidance for pregnant women and their families – updated 3 April 2020

Safety Planning

A safety plan is for someone to use when they are feeling that their mental health and wellbeing is low, and/or that they are at risk of self-harm or acting on suicidal thoughts – a plan to remind themselves of reasons to live, family and friends they can talk with and things that can make them feel strong and in control of their feelings.

By having a safety plan, you’re making sure that there are strategies you can use to keep yourself safe, which can help you feel more in control when everything feels out of control. Think of your safety plan as your ‘mental health first-aid kit’; it includes different things that will help you through a crisis.

Everyone’s plan is personal and different, but it can help by walking someone through their steps to keep them safe. For people who self-harm or feel suicidal it’s not designed to be their only support, but can help as part of a wider approach to supporting their wellbeing.

More information about how you can support someone to create a safety plan, alongside signposting to further sources of support, access to free online suicide prevention and general wellbeing training for adults, and Papyrus’ children’s safety plan can be found on the Cornwall Council website.
